

If you are in an accident:

- First get the license plate number of the other vehicle (in case they flee)
- Next look for an 'independent witness.' Someone who saw the accident, but is in no way related to you or the other driver and try to get their name and phone number. IE: If someone stops to ask if you are ok, ask if they saw what happened and try to get contact info for them.
- Call 911 and ask to have an officer come to the scene to file a motor vehicle accident report

Most people will tell the truth to the police at the scene but they often change their story to make themselves look better when they talk to the insurance company and suddenly an accident that isn't your fault gets blamed on you. The independent witness is the best defense against this and the police report is a close second. Keep a Pen & Paper in the Glove Compartment, a phone camera is great of course but the pen & paper is necessary in case your battery dies.

If you are in an accident:

- First get the license plate number of the other vehicle (in case they flee)
- Next look for an 'independent witness.' Someone who saw the accident, but is in no way related to you or the other driver and try to get their name and phone number. IE: If someone stops to ask if you are ok, ask if they saw what happened and try to get contact info for them.
- Call 911 and ask to have an officer come to the scene to file a motor vehicle accident report

Most people will tell the truth to the police at the scene but they often change their story to make themselves look better when they talk to the insurance company and suddenly an accident that isn't your fault gets blamed on you. The independent witness is the best defense against this and the police report is a close second. Keep a Pen & Paper in the Glove Compartment, a phone camera is great of course but the pen & paper is necessary in case your battery dies.

If you are in an accident:

- First get the license plate number of the other vehicle (in case they flee)
- Next look for an 'independent witness.' Someone who saw the accident, but is in no way related to you or the other driver and try to get their name and phone number. IE: If someone stops to ask if you are ok, ask if they saw what happened and try to get contact info for them.
- Call 911 and ask to have an officer come to the scene to file a motor vehicle accident report

Most people will tell the truth to the police at the scene but they often change their story to make themselves look better when they talk to the insurance company and suddenly an accident that isn't your fault gets blamed on you. The independent witness is the best defense against this and the police report is a close second. Keep a Pen & Paper in the Glove Compartment, a phone camera is great of course but the pen & paper is necessary in case your battery dies.

If you are in an accident:

- First get the license plate number of the other vehicle (in case they flee)
- Next look for an 'independent witness.' Someone who saw the accident, but is in no way related to you or the other driver and try to get their name and phone number. IE: If someone stops to ask if you are ok, ask if they saw what happened and try to get contact info for them.
- Call 911 and ask to have an officer come to the scene to file a motor vehicle accident report

Most people will tell the truth to the police at the scene but they often change their story to make themselves look better when they talk to the insurance company and suddenly an accident that isn't your fault gets blamed on you. The independent witness is the best defense against this and the police report is a close second. Keep a Pen & Paper in the Glove Compartment, a phone camera is great of course but the pen & paper is necessary in case your battery dies.